

BICKERSTAFF'S BOSTON ALMANACK,

For the Year of our REDEMPTION,
I 7th 8.
being the Second Year of AMERICAN INDEPENDENCE.

And the Second LEAP-Year.

Calculated for the Meridian of BOSTON, Lat. $42^{\circ} 25' N$.
CONTAINING, besides what is necessary in an Almanack, a Variety of useful and instructing Pieces.

THE GLORIOUS WASHINGTON and GATES.

Designed by BENJAMIN WEST, a Student in Art, at London, and Author of this Almanack for twelve Years past, against those false Editions printed by McCall, of Newbury, 1776 and by Boyle and Draper and Phillips, of Boston, for 77:
The Author of this genuine Copy never had any Connexions with those Printers.

SOLDERS: Printed by B. RUSSELL, at his Printing-Office at the Bell-Tavern. (Pr. 12/ per Dozen and 1/ 6d single.)

The Lawfulness of WAR proved.

WAR is proved to be lawful, First By the Baptist's answer to the soldiers, when they came to his baptism. Luke 14. Secondly, By Christ's commending the centurion's faith. Thirdly, By St. Paul's using a band of soldiers, against the treachery of the Jews. Fourthly, By St. Peter's baptizing Cornelius, without his giving over the military employment. We may conclude, then, a soldier is one of a lawful, necessary, and commendable profession: His pay is an honorable addition, but a valuable compensation for his pains. Though money be the rewards of war, yet if those sinews chance to shrink, and pay to short he takes a . . . of this convulsion patiently; he will not expose himself to needless perils, but if a danger meets, he goes over it with valor, or under it with patience; and will not give ground but on one of these three conditions, either assured peace, absolute victory, or an honorable death.

ANECDOTE of MONTECUCULI the Imperial General.

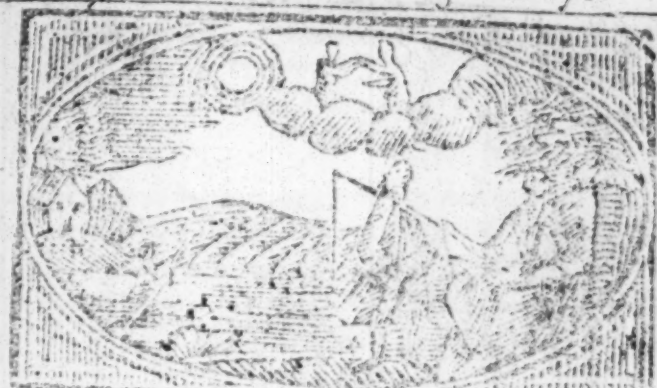

THE Imperial General Montecuculi had, during a late given orders that none, under pain of death should go through the corn-fields; a soldier, ignorant of the order, returning from a neighboring village through a path in the midst of corn: The General perceiving him, sends an order the Provost of the army to hang the soldier immediately. The soldier alledging to the General his ignorance of the order Montecuculi calls to the Provost to do his duty; the Provost enraged at this (being still armed) levels his piece at the General's head, crying I was not guilty till now,—he fires, but misses the General, who instantly grants his pardon.

ANECDOTE, from the French, of Marshal MONTLAC.

MARSHAL Montlac, so idolized by the military for his valor, his noble simplicity, and sweetness of manner, made words in his excellent commentaries:—“Never did I go on my duty without imploring God to be my support and helper. Since I was twenty years of age never did I let one day pass without praying to him, and asking his forgiveness; and truly can I say, that several times on seeing the enemy march up to us, I had such a dread upon me, that my heart as it were failed and my limbs lost their strength and trembled: This was my case I own, whatever stout face some may pretend to put on in such matters; but having sent up my prayer to God, I found my strength return, and with a proper spirit for action. Oh my Creator, if this be the determined day of my death, give me to die as becomes a good man. I do not supplicate thee for life, every thing concerning me I refer to thy divine goodness. I then going to my short Latin collects, I vow and profess before God and men that I felt myself so animated and resolute, that I became quite another man from what I was when I began my devotions.”

ON ASTRONOMY. Concluded from last Year.

MORE yet remote from day's all-cheering source Large Jupiter performs his constant course:
friendly Moons with borrow'd lustre rise,
flow their beams, benign, and light his skies.
Farthest and last, scarce warm'd by Phoebus ray,
through his wide orbit Saturn wheels away.
How great the change, could we be waded there!
How slow the seasons! and how long the year!
The Moon, on us reflects its chearful light:
Here, five attendants brighten up the night.
Here the blue Firmament bedeck'd with stars,
Here, over head, a lucid Arch appears.
Hence, how large, how strong the Sun's bright ball!
Not seen from thence, how languid and how small!
When the keen north with all his fury blows,
Ungeals the floods, and forms the fleecy snows,
His heat intense to what can there be known:
Warmer our poles than is its burning zone.
Who there inhabits must have other pow'rs,
Senses, and veins and sense, and life than ours.
The moment's cold, like their's, would pierce the bone,
Freeze the heart-blood, and turn us all to stone,
Strange and amazing must the difference be,
Twixt this dull planet and bright Mercury:
Yet reason says, nor can we doubt at all,
Millions of beings dwell on either ball,
With constitutions fitted for that spot,
Where Providence, all-wise, has fix'd their lot.
At his command, affrighting human-kind,
Comets drag on their blazing lengths behind:
Nor as we think, do they at random rove,
But, in determin'd times, through long eclipses move.
And tho' sometimes they near approach the sun,
Sometimes beyond our System's orbit run,
Tho' out their race they act their Maker's will,
His pow'r declare, his purposes fulfil.

Or a few scattered Thoughts composed by a young Lady on her embarking on board the Ship Symmetry, December 8, 1775, in order to quit that Capital.

Adieu, dear BOSTON, for no more!

With pleasure shall I see,

Thy softer smiles, thy flatter'd domes,

So pleasing unto me,

The sons of Belial now possess

That peasant's goodly place,

Where from GOD's house without annoy,

We heard the word of grace.

But now the temples of the LORD,

How they're profanely us'd!

Some fill'd with provender for beasts,

Some with their beasts aburd!

How are the joys of worship broke!

They tare the buildings down;

And he that deals the heaviness speaks,

Proclaims the chief reason.

Farewell my friends and kindred dear,

Whom I do leave behind;

May GOD be gracious unto you,

And mercifully kind.

And he will cause to cease
Thy feet that in thy bowels are;

Or make them yield to peace.

Lift up thy feet, and march in haste,

Ahead our ruin calls;

See what a wide and fearful waste

Is made within thy walls.

Devoted BOSTON! ah adieu!

What pain I undergo!

Because I seem to feel thy fate

And dismal overthrow.

Will GOD forever hold his peace?

And will he not arise?

Display his thunder-bolts abroad,

His vengeance from the skies?

With aching hearts and trembling souls,

We pray with one accord:

Preserve the City, gracious GOD,

From ruin and the sword.

Yes, GOD will sure espouse his cause.

And for his people fight,

His honor he will vindicate,

And quell their boasted might.

LORD, form our Generals for the field,

With all their martial skill,

God preserve our just record to record,
And make their hearts of steel.

When GOD our Leader joins in arms,

What thunder of his loud alarms,

The lightning of his spear?

Our foes would triumph in our blood,

And make our hope their jest;

Plead thine own cause, Almighty GOD,

And give thy people rest.

THE TURKEY and ANT. A FABLE.

IN other men we faults can spy,

And blame the mole that aims their eyes,

Each little speck and blemish find,

To our own stronger errors bind.

A Turkey, riv'd of common food,

Forsook the barn and sought the wood,

Behind her ran her infant train

Collecting here and there a grain.

Draw near, my birds the mother cries,

This bill delicious fare supplies;

Behold, the busy Negro race,

See millions blacken all the place;

Fear not, like me with freedom eat;

An Ant is well delighted meat.

*How blest how envied were our life, Sure men for gluttony are curst, Could we but 'scape the poulterer's Of the sev'n deadly sins the worst.
 knife ! An Ant who climb beyond his reach,
 A man, curst man on turkeys prey, Thus answer'd from the neigh-
 And Christmas shortens all our days, bring beech, sometimes with oysters we combine, Ere you remark another's sin, sometimes assist the sav'ry chine. Bid thy own conscience look within,
 from the low peasant to the lord, Control thy more voracious bill,
 The turkey smoaks on ev'ry board Nor for a breakfast nations kill.*

A comical Adventure of a SLEEP-WALKER

A Young gentleman in London, having occasion to pay a visit to a relation of his in the country, it fell out that the gentleman's house at that time happened to be full, on account of a kin's woman's wedding that had been lately kept there ; he made the young gentleman not welcome, and told him every room in the house was full but one, and that was haunted. The young gentleman replied, sir, you will much oblige me by letting me lie there, for I have often coveted to be in a place that was haunted. The gentleman ordered the chamber to be got ready, and a good fire made therein, it being winter time. When bed time came he was conducted to his chamber, and having recommended himself to the divine protection, went to bed, and in a little time went to sleep, out of which he was awaked about 3 o'clock in the morning, by the opening of the chamber door, and the coming in of somebody in the appearance of a young woman, having a night dress on her head, and only her smock on ; and this unknown visitor going to the chimney, took the poker and stirred up the fire, by

... of which he could more distinctly discern the appearance of young woman, but whether flesh and blood, or an airy phantom, he could not tell. This appearance having staid sometime before the fire last walked two or three times about the room, and then went to the bedside, where she soon lay down very quietly. This unknown bedfellow soon startled the young gentleman, and as soon as he perceived her to breathe, drew near and found her substantial flesh and blood.
The gentleman being all this while asleep, he let her lay without disturbing her, or doing any thing else but laying his hand upon her to ascertain of what sex she was which he had but just time to do before she flung off the bed clothes again, and getting up, walked the room as she had done before, opened the door and went out. The young gentleman perceiving by this in what manner the room was haunted, slept very well till next morning; at which time the master of the house came to him to know how he did, and whether he had seen any thing or not? He told him an apparition appeared to him, but begged the favor of him to say nothing farther till the whole family were together; which request was complied with. The desire of the family to know the issue of this affair, made them dress with all expedition, and they were all convened by 11 o'clock. When they were all together in the great hall, the young gentleman told them that he had one favor to desire of the ladies before he would say any thing, and that was to know whether any of them had lost a ring.
The young gentlewoman from whose finger it was taken, having lost it all the morning, and not knowing in what manner she lost it, was glad to hear of it again, and readily owned that she had lost a ring; but whether lost or mislaid, she knew not. The young gentleman asked her if that was it, giving it into her hand, which she acknowledged to be hers, and thanking him, he turned to his kinsman the master of the house, "Now, sir, said he, I can assure you that taking the gentlewoman by the hand, this is the lovely spirit by which your chamber is haunted." And thereupon repeated what had been already declared. The confusion the young lady was in at this relation cannot be expressed; she declared herself ignorant of all.
The young gentleman said, but did believe it might be so on account of a ring, which she perfectly well remembered she had on when she went to bed, and knew not how she lost it. The relation gave the whole company much diversion, and the father declared, that since his daughter had already gone to bed to his kinsman, it should be his duty if he did not next go to bed to his daughter, he being willing to bestow her upon him, with a good fortune. This generous offer was advantageous to the young gentleman that he could by no means refuse it; and his late bedfellow hearing what her father had said, readily prevailed upon to accept of him for his husband.

The SAILOR'S MISTAKE.

A Cannon ball, one bloody day
Took a poor Sailor's leg away
When on his comrade's back he made off.
A second Earth took his head off;
His leg was off, and not his head.

The fellow, on this odd emergency Carries him pickpack to the surgeons
L-ds! cries the Dr. are you drunk?
To bring me here a headless trunk.
A lying dog! cries Jack,--be jant
His leg was off, and not his head.

E. RUSSELL, at the Printing-Office, at the House, at the Bell-Tavern, in DENVER, carries on the Printing-Business in several Branches; where Travelling-traders and others are desired to call and supply themselves with a number of new books, &c. some of which are on the times, and will be sold cheap by the quantity.—In compliance with a late Resolve of the General Assembly of this State, 3 d. lb. will be paid for white linen and cotton and linen rags, 2 d. lb. for coarse and check ditto, or old canvas and sail-cloth, 5 d. lb. for old junk, delivered either at the Printing-Office, or to HUGH McCLEAN and Com. at the Paper-Mills, in Milton; Weaver's thrumms and Shoe-maker's and Taylor's linen shreds will make good paper.—LADIES and FRIENDS to LIBERTY! be kind enough to take notice what a saving as well as benefit the PAPER-MAKING BRANCH is to the Community in general; for without a supply of Rags, even school-books of every kind for youth will soon be wanting.
